Resumen

Mi proyecto consiste de cuatro episodios televisivos de 13 minutos de duración; cada uno contiene un reportaje sobre tres jóvenes artistas, mostrando así los Rostros de una generación que sueña. El proyecto por sí mismo pretende cumplir principalmente con los siguientes objetivos: convertirse en un equipo de trabajo profesional junto con los compañeros del equipo de producción; llevar a cabo la realización de todo el proceso de producción de un audiovisual; trabajar varios recursos visuales e técnicos para hacer los episodios visualmente atractivos y dinámicos. Con una distribución equitativa de los roles del proceso, hemos trabajado siguiendo las especificaciones de esta memoria, para así conseguir unos resultados profesionalmente dignos.

1. Introduction

Rostres d’una generació que somia is a TV project that has been carried out by a powerful team made up by Laura Ibáñez, Tommaso Arnaboldi and Elena Barea. The enthusiasm, the eager to work, the desire to know and learn constantly, also motivated by cultural and social issues, are the premises that have united us; main the characteristics of the small team that we have created. All in all, with the aim of showing and explaining everything in innovative ways that the mainstream media usually ignores or forgets.

With this project, we wanted to make visible some of the Catalan new young artists and entrepreneurs (mainly from Barcelona and nearby). Young people usually have original projects in mind, and some of them, after a hard work, can make them real. Nevertheless at the beginning it is quite difficult to be “famous” or catch the attention of the big public, so we want to be a launch pad for them, giving them the chance to talk about their project and show their work on the “medias”.

Rostres is an audiovisual project consisting of four chapters and on each one of them are shown three young artists, groups or collectives and entities. Each chapter deals with a specific topic: music, photography, craftwork and visual design. Each chapter is a short report about 13 minutes, and we have tried to make, more or less, an equitable distribution of time among each character. We have also explored new television formats and we tried to bring our project to these trends, providing it with a novel approach and a solid and dynamic narration.

Chapters present everyday life of each character; their workplace and their usual environment. To be closer and more personal, the producer team decided to carry out all the interviews taking place in the creative space of each artist. In this way, the future viewers will be able to see where and how artists work even approaching closely in their work, closely following the creative process, sharing the highlights and trends of the Catalan capital. We want to offer a very personal look to the nowadays artistic and cultural world.

The project aims to collect each young artist's opinions and experiences, watch them creating and experiencing; also sharing the passion and curiosity to arise in the viewers these feelings. It also aims to introduce these young artists who make up the Catalan
Cultural Scene; it wants to give voice to those who are the main responsible of our contemporary culture. We want to express all these things through an audiovisual product with an attractive aesthetic and which is able to capture the future viewers attention.
2. Aims.

2.1. Main Objectives.

- Develop a complete audiovisual project, walking through the different steps of the creative process. Embracing all the aspects from the preproduction to the distribution, and achieving complete autonomy during the whole project.

- Develop our ability to work as part of a team, also to produce and manage a professional project and application or production for an external client.

- Blend different visual and technical resources to make the episodes visually attractive, becoming more clear and gripping.

- Break with the traditional reportage structure, trying to get a new format and visual aesthetic that fits with the reportage topic.

- Show a young view of the Catalan culture, hide behind new faces and emergent talents.

2.2. Specific Objectives.

- To achieve the two first main objectives we will have to achieve a good workflow with specific roles for each member; achieving a final objective, and cooperating for achieve an audiovisual product with a strong authorship distinction.

We believe that to achieve a good workflow is very important to emphasize the following aspects that we have to achieve:

- The capability to analyse and adapt to changing technology trends.
- Effective group work.
- Time management and multi tasking.
- Internal and external communication skills.
- Ability to react to unforeseen events.
• To achieve the third and fourth main objectives we will have to promote our creative, technical and professional abilities working in different visual and technical resources on each one episode, making them visually attractive and clear. We will also have to get a dynamic, fresh and nimble working mode in order to draw the attention of our desired target audience; for this reason, we will also have to create a good feedback with each artist involved in the project, so that our work will serve them for promotion and advertising their work.

• To achieve the last main objective, we will have to analyse the currently culture movements with a young view, with the goal of release new artists and creators from different artistic areas, and be able to share with the viewers our passion and curiosity towards the culture. Also, we will show a young point of view about the current cultural movements with the intention to introduce on it emerging artists and their personal realities.
3. Research and References.

3.1. Previous Research.
We want to offer a television product that is in agreement with those emerging technologies of our society, feeling ourselves responsible towards the public that we serve as communicators. We want to experiment with the new television formats, emphasizing the visual and aesthetical treatment, adopting the television programme makers and broadcasters role.

We are joined by a mutual interest in the more effective use of these media to inform, enlighten and entertain, and we want to dedicate to exploring their limits beyond the merely conventional and derivative. All this in relation to the portrayed generation, restless youth who experiments and works in innovate ways to carry out their dreams.

Mass media are constantly changing. Globalization, capitalism and the ICT revolution have shaped a postmodern era [1] in which cultural and social boundaries are diluted with the creation of new hybrid models in all cultural fields [2]. In this way, the mass media in general, and television in particular, strive to adapt themselves to the fluidity and constant motion that characterize this new global landscape. It is from here that are emerging new genres and TV formats, which lose their previous rigidity of their descriptive limits.

General interest television have sent outside their grids those formats such as cultural and documentaries TV products, separating it to secondary channels or marginalizing it on strange times on the grid. Cultural approaches have been decreasing in public television, being forgotten some of their principles (on private TV almost never happened this approach [3]), and they have opted for offer increasingly unrefined products, investing in the new paradigm where the main TV formats tend to talk shows, reality shows or late shows [4].

We want to differentiate from the new television formats about emotional entertainment [5], that become new trends in TV consumption and a new business forms, and therefore which trivialize people and society. We chose to create content that is not intended to revolutionize rating audiences, or that degrade the human condition; we want to create contents that seek a specific “tastefully” profile spectator (and leaving aside without considering the “trash TV” large consumers profile).

Somehow, we take reference aspects of the Catalan public television (like CCMA [6] or XAL [7]), which adapt part of its program schedule to the cultural aspects of our society. There are TV programs that deviate from the general trend and which succeed with a cultural longshot, and those emerging young talent who create and follow trends alternatives. All of this without the intention of achieving a higher levels of audiences by the spectacle and the content trivialization, taking Input [17] or Minipute [18] philosophy.

3.1.2. About the portrayed Generation.

For several years (between 2008 and 2010) our society is immersed in an extensive crisis that includes various fields (economical, social, of values...). The whole society is suffering the consequences, but we look at a particular generation; a young generation that have run into a wall that prevents them from entering to the labor market and, therefore, does not allow progress by themselves. It is a generation with really prepared young people, who look to the future with scepticism, living in uncertainty to find work and who live with the fear that, if they find it, it will tend to instability and to precariousness [8]-[10].

This is a generation with very pronounced frustrated prospects, because it is young people who were born in a security material context that, right now, it is truncated.

Spanish State is experiencing a negative migration balance, which is higher each year (since 2009 nearly 350.000 young people have emigrated [8], [14], [15]). But in front of the big obstacle course faced by this young generation, it imposes a positive message to overcome this frustration. There are those who believe that they can react in front of this situation and who believe that they can change the rules imposed; and, therefore, they decide to act to achieve it.

We decided to work together with the segment of that lost generation that decided not to put limits on themselves and not being limited by the situation around them, and who decided to move forward on small scale. Beyond the crisis situation, there are young people with ideas, talent and excellence, who decide to carry out their projects redefining a new economy, maybe designed to crowfounding, entrepreneurship and collaborative knowledge [11]. There are hundreds of projects that create a successful model that shows that we create the future (youth society) and that change is possible.

There are young people going ahead with their dreams, helped on large extent by the Internet communication tools. The new network society, based on the interconnection and shared knowledge, has shaken up processes immovable until now, such as new production forms and collective finances [16].

Therefore, there are many young people working on that they love, and we have selected twelve of them involved in cultural aspects of the Catalan postmodern era.
3.2. References.

To set out the style and the aesthetic of our episodes we search some examples of videos to get some ideas and think about it. We realize that we really want to empathise the aesthetic part, what we want is to make an attractive product and attract the attention of the audience it should be visually interesting. Because of that we want to take as a reference the following videos.

3.2.1. Visual references.

ENDLESS ROAD: The colour of the images is amazing, making the video more gripping and agreeable. The shoots are quite good, and mixed with the edition give to the video a good pace. They give to the video a “hipster” style, which is really fashionable nowadays. (https://vimeo.com/29579042).

Fig. 3.2.1.1 Aesthetical Reference: Endless Road
VIVE EL IDIOMA: That video includes amazing graphics to introduce the different topics. As far as we are concerned is really important to find a good way to distribute and introduce the diverse topics and parts of the documentary, and we think that using good graphics is a good way to do it. Moreover, the color and the tone of the video is quite good too, follows the “vintage” style too, and it’s really aesthetical. (https://vimeo.com/18952185).

MR. WONDERFUL SHOP: We like the aesthetic of this video; closed shoots, blur, color.... We like this kind of aesthetic. We also like the mix between interview and resource shoots, and the rhythm of that video. (https://vimeo.com/51223618).

INDIE GAME: However we like the aesthetic of the video, we want to emphasise this project because of their rhythm and the structure of its interviews. (https://vimeo.com/25268139).

3.2.2. Opening references.

MOTION GRAPHIC: We think that can be a good option doing a motion graphic opening, and this is a good reference (https://vimeo.com/34797268).

3D INTEGRATION: Another option for the opening is doing something with 3D and real images (https://vimeo.com/27117439).

![Fig. 3.2.2.2 Opening Reference: 3D Integration]

NEW GIRL: We will do the presentation of the interviewer with a picture framework, and with the name printed, like in this video. We think that it's a different way to start and interview (http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aW3LEVGQ-Ie). We also want to create a distinctive of the program doing something similar of the picture frame following the example.

![Fig. 3.2.2.3 Opening Reference: New Girl]
3.2.3. TV Programs references.

SHORT DOCS: is a set of short documentaries called “Tallers sonors” (Sound Workshops), composed by indefinite duration chapters. On each documentary, they interview a band, or a songwriter... showing his personality, his workplace and how he works. In short, this documentary is in a way similar to our idea of how to focus the cultural aspects. (http://www.walkietalkiefilms.com).

Fig. 3.2.3.1 TV Programs Reference: Short Docs

BESTIARI IL·LUSTRAT: It is a TV3 programme (a Catalan public television show) where are paraded the Catalan fauna illustrated and the most renowned personalities in our country. It has interviews with people of all ages, so reports are focused on people who are already known for the audience. However, the program has crafted aesthetics, and there are all kinds of shoots: from the most traditional to those most captivating (http://blogs.tv3.cat/bestiari).

33 REVOLUCIONS: We really enjoy this TV3 program, they make really interesting interviews, with a really interesting quality images. To prepare each chapter, they live with artists for several days, so it can show to the audience their real and their imaginary world (http://www.tv3.cat/33revolucions).

Fig. 3.2.3.3 TV Programs Reference: 33 Revolucion

LOS OFICIOS DE LA CULTURA: it is a RTVE program (the Spanish public television) with 30 minutes duration. It tries to unlock the trade secrets, through the encounter of a character who has developed his artistic career, and whose trajectory seems especially interesting, and a young who dreams to pursue that profession (http://www.rtve.es/alacarta/videos/los-oficios-de-la-cultura/).

Fig. 3.2.3.4 TV Programs Reference: 33 Los Oficios de la cultura
LA GALERIA DELS OFICIS: it is a BTV program (Barcelona public television) that intimates a portrait of various artists working in Barcelona. It is a program very similar to our project, and for this we take it as a reference (http://www.btv.cat/lagaleriadelsoficis/).

!Fig. 3.2.3.5 TV Programs Reference: La galeria dels oficis

3.2.4. Musical references.

We wanted to focus on a specific musical style, which include experimental and minimalist music, and also indie music.

We have chosen mainly these options because we think that they can give enough strength and dynamism to our productions, and because they are also musical styles that follow our project’s philosophy. All the music styles that we have chosen are own music (Tommaso creations) or music from platforms like www.freemusic.org [12].

We tried to use minimalist music because it has prominent features like consonant harmony, steady pulse, stasis or gradual transformation, and often reiteration of musical phrases or smaller units such as figures, motifs and cells. Features that, combined with certain images of each episode, help us to express the message in an alternative way.

We also opted for indie music because of its philosophy, as it is produced independently from major commercial record labels, a process that may include an autonomous “Do-It-Yourself” approach to recording and publishing.

Musical examples can be found in ANNEXE VI.
4. Previous conception.

4.1. Origins of the Project.

In a changing society where competition is increasingly global and where the production centres are offshoring to countries with lower labour costs, in our country young people are emerging to develop their cultural and artistic abilities. This people are deciding to start a project which will change and which differentiate them from the rest of the society.

Most of these young people maybe focus their ideas in the traditional and outdated, and they try to improve it and create what will be its new product. We are referring to this entire group of people who try to understand life in a positive and cheerful, where fun and elegance intertwine as own label. They are young creative and responsible people, who have quality and innovative projects, and who are eager to move forward with them.

It is for this people that Rostres project was born; from the Producer Team we decided to support all these people, helping them to spread out their dreams and to make a small step forward with their communication, promotion and advertising work.

And that is why we created this project, trying to distinguish it from the traditional trend by promoting these initiatives with what we do best: creating an attractive, dynamic and useful audiovisual product, for all those people who decide to cooperate with us.
4.2. Project Outline.

To develop this new project, we have to take into account four phases of work:

- The first one is documenting and research, during this period we will look for information about different persons who have interesting projects in process, and make an agenda with contacts of people for interviewing.
- The second phase will be the writing of the scripts for each interview and discuss the structure for each thematic chapter. We will get in touch with the artists for establishing the recording days with them.
- During the third period we will record and create all the audiovisual material needed for each thematic reportage; interviews, graphics, openings, resource shoots...
- The last phase is the post-production and distribution. We will edit all the material recorded, add the graphics, improve the audio, add the background music... And we will start with the distribution plan.

This is the approximated calendar with these phases distribution;

4.3. Project Delivery.

As we are a group of three, we divided the different tasks to get individual and specific roles for each member.

Table 4.3. Roles Distribution.

4.3.1. Preproduction.

Producer: Their work focuses to contact with the artists through our project email, based on the information provided by the Scriptwriter (annexe I). She also has to get the necessary equipment to carry out the project: the technical and the atrezzo. Otherwise, she must find the locations most appropriate for each day of shooting; therefore, she also has to inform the team about all of these things. She also has to being in contact with our Project Mentor and with Glyndwr professors.

Script Writer: My work focuses on research the basic information about the Catalan culture scene and the best references, to create a context for the artists’ research along with the Producer. Also, I have to take care of the artists’ profile that we will interview; I have include on each profile the artist contact, his main websites, and a short biography. This information (annexe I) comes to the Producer, who makes the contact with each artist. Later, once they confirm and accept our proposal, I write the script of the future interview, taking alternative information from articles, websites... of each of the artists (annexe II).
As principal person in charge of this phase, when I made the scripts (annexe II), I prepared a set of questions to keep the general leitmotif desired. However, we wanted that the artists were the main characters; so, to achieve this, during the interviews the script changed a little bit, because the artists have guided us by their most interesting experiences and they have talked about the most important moments of their job (which maybe we had not considered as important writing the first script). In short, we wanted to create a feedback with them in order to get own the project in both sides.

Technical Responsible: His task is to carry out the technical equipment research, to achieve the requirements most suitable for the filming. He has taken into account the team’s own material, as well as what should be rented. He also has found information about techniques and shooting styles and has reported to the team to make them during recording.

4.3.2. Production.

During the filming, our roles have been quite scattered, because each member of the team have had to organize their personal schedules to combine them with artists’ interviews. That is why each member has attended in the interviews that they was able to. However, we have always tried to be two of us, in order to distribute the minimal tasks (annexe IV). Therefore, the camera, the sound technician and the interviewer roles have changed of person and we have all been actively involved in each of them.

Moreover, on this stage there were another roles to perform:

Technical Script: I have distributed people on each role depending of the interview assistants, to make sure that all the tasks were covered (5.2.2 Recording Plan). I have also done a technical script of each episode that it can found in the annexe III.

Soundtrack: Tommaso has created the soundtrack considering the references and inspirations, for the future chapters assembly.

Producer: Laura has continued in contact with each artist to agree timetables and locations of the interviews; she also sought to have the necessary equipment for each recording day. Finally, she has to have all the licenses of our artists (annexe V).
4.3.3. Postproduction.

Video Editor: I have worked in the video edition and assembling for each character (task which I explain later).

Post Producer: Laura has made the colour correction for each chapter; she also has taken care about transitions and different effects application in each shot and sequence. She has entered the mask and has created the credits on each episode.

Audio Editor: Tommaso has corrected the audio levels and has introduced the appropriate soundtrack on each sequence. He has made the general audio adjustment of the final episodes.
4.4. Project Locations.

4.4.1. Musicians

Els Laietans: Girona (Girona) – Musicians were in a stage out of Barcelona and we drove up there to do the interview, in the middle of nature. We can also see them in action while they were rehearsing, and we carried out the interview in one of the terraces of the old farmhouse.

Jordi Montañez: El Carmel (Barcelona) – He opened his house doors and we made the interview in his balcony, gazing at the entire Barcelona views from the high-rise district of the city.

Cloverace: Alexandre Teatre (Barcelona) – taking advantage of the group being that evening on an online TV program called “Visto lo Visto”, we got into different theatre rooms to interview the young members of Cloverace. Also, the producer of this program has given us the images that were recorded for them on this day, to adding them in our project.

4.4.2. Visual Art Designers.

Conrad Roset: Gràcia (Barcelona) – he decided to share his workplace with other artists, so we did the interview in this concurred place. It is situated in the middle of Vila de Gràcia, a famous district from Barcelona. We could share experiences and knowledge with he and his peers.

Benja Villegas: Gràcia (Barcelona) – we came into his house, also in Gràcia, to carry out the interview.

Poker Tattoo: Sant Adrià (Barcelona) – his studio has a few years of life; however, Ismael opened us the doors of his small but cosy tattoo studio located in a city next to the Catalan capital.
4.4.3. Craft People.

Numon: Reus (Tarragona) – Núria has always lived in the city; however, some years ago she decided to move into a lost house near Reus (a little city from Tarragona). There she set up her workplace and now is where she usually spends more time doing her work. We were able to record the interview inside the studio because it was well lighted by natural sunlight.

Palens: Palens Studio (Badalona) – With less than a year old, Palens has been able to create a big studio where they can carry out all phases of their work. We did the interview in the lobby of the study.

MissHyde: Argentona (Maresme) – Anna also moved out the city a few years ago; nowadays she lives in Argentona, a little village near Mataró (el Maresme) and she works on her house-studio. Here was where we conducted the interview and where we could check that it is possible to develop an awesome creativity in a small space.

4.4.4. Photographers.

Blanca Viñas: Blanca Works on the street, which is why we met her in a park hidden in the middle of a large housing blocks in the district of Eixample. Also, we met her another day to go in a photographic session at Ciutadella Park.

GroundPress: Antic Teatre (Barcelona) – Antic Teatre is a cultural and social centre housed in a building from 1650, and considered the cultural heritage of the city. This bar is usually a benchmark of the current independent scene. Groundpress tend to join them in its ward every week.

Lita Bosch: Barcelona – We carried out the interview at her home, where she has mounted a photographic studio and a photographic lab. We were able to record how she does this process of photographic developer.

CAMERAS AND LENS

- NIKON D3100
- NIKON D7000
- Nikkor 18-55mm G AF-S f/3.5-5.6 G AF-S ED DX
- Nikkor AF-S 50mm f/1.8G
- Tamron SP AF 15-50mm f/2.8 XR Di II LD IF Lens Review
- Tripods Manfrotto
- Tripods: Elena & Laura
- Handmade rail by Tommaso

We have used Reflex cameras with some kind of tripods to get good quality images with a nice aesthetic. Reflex cameras give us the possibility of blur and good illumination with the different lenses (35mm, 50mm, all of them f/1.8).

It also allowed us to work lightly and without having to worry about the space that would have to record the interviews, because of cameras size. It is true that according to the different lenses we used, we were forced to need some space, but with DSLR cameras we gained much in agility and versatility.

Another reason why we have used these cameras is because Laura and I have already have them our own. This fact makes the job more comfortable and speeds up the task of organizing and providing material for each day of interview.

Finally, we have chosen to work with this type of cameras as it is an emerging trend (both professionally and homemade video world) and the leading brands of DSLR photography have adapted easily to the desire for a HD or Full HD quality; which allows us to get a professional result.

We have combined these cameras with various lenses, which we had at our disposal. The camera lens that we have always used has been the 18-55mm, because we could use three like this. This one has allowed us to get a good XLS and LS shoots with good angulation. In the most recent interviews recorded, we have used the Tamron 15-50mm; we have used it mainly combined with the handmade rail.
Furthermore, we have opted to use two types of fixed focal lenses: 36mm and 50mm, both of them f/1.8. We have fallen in love with them because the game that allow for the depth of field, because let us make shots really closed with a great focus on the objects.

Finally, we have always tried to record with some tripods and stabilizers. Sometimes we could not use them and it is for this reason that we had to learn and practise different techniques for recording with camera in hand. However, Tommaso created a handmade rail (just over 1 meter long) that has served to stabilize small panoramic shots during the last interviews.

AUDIO

- Audio Recorder Zoom H4n
- Pole
- Behringer B5 (Kit)
- Canon-Canon 5mts

Regarding to the audio aspect, we recorded the audio of the interviews with the Zoom H4n voice recorder. We connected on it the XLR cable, which carried the audio from the Behringer B5 microphone. That is, we recorded the voice through Behringer micro held in the pole. We have also used the voice recorder to capture the environmental sound and noise from the surroundings, using the stereo microphone integrated on it.

We have could not use tie microphone (although being the main option to record artists’ voice at the beginning) because we could not get them from anywhere. However, the method that we followed helped us to get a good result because Behringer microphone has captured the audios with a really good quality.

Also, the pole has been helpful because we often did not have enough hands to carry out all the interview’s tasks, and it helped us to fix the microphone position placed in to the focus voice. When we could not hold the pole, we subjected it with some furniture that we found.
LIGHTING

- Lighting Kit: filters, diffusers, polarizers, 3 tripods, 3 focus, 3 visors, 220v adapter, replacement bulbs, protective gloves, pins, optional dimmer.
- Spotlight silver & white.

Related with the illumination we have used mainly the natural light, anyway in some moment we have improved the natural light with some extra light sources (night, indoors interviews...). In general, we could work with the natural sunlight because we have always gone to well-lit areas and to open spaces.

ATREZZO & SCENERY

- IKEA Picture Framework
- Background: Fabric with dots + Special cardboard
- Artists name: Special cardboard + Printed paper

We decided to use the picture framework as a distinctive feature of the project to give it a concrete aesthetic theme, and also to maintain continuity between each artist and between each episode.

We decided to use this picture framework and make the artists appear moving behind it to create an original presentation sequence of each artist. In some way, we try to convert these sequences in the way to show their faces (referring to the project title) and to introduce the general idea about what it turns around the entire chapter.

POSTPRODUCTION PROGRAMS

- Video Edition: Adobe Premiere Pro CS6
- Colour Correction: Red Giat – Magic Bullet Colorista.
- Image Postproduction: Adobe After Effects CS6
- Audio Edition: Adobe Audition CS6
- Subtitles: Microsoft Office 2011 & Jubler Editor
We have used Adobe Premiere CS6 for the video edition, Adobe After Effects for the motion graphics and some effect, Magic Bullet Colorista and Look plugins for the colour correction. To design our graphics we have used Adobe CS6 Illustrator and Photoshop, and for the final credits design we have combined Adobe After Effects CS6 and Adobe Premiere CS6.

Finally, to add subtitles we have created an external .srt file for each episode using Jubler Editor. This technique allows us to add subtitles only when future viewers want to turn them into social platforms.

5.1.3. Main Characters.

My work during preproduction was divided into two phases.

The first one was information research to contextualize the team of the Catalan cultural scene. So I did a hard work researching this people who are part of it, and who were more available to us for the project. I had to find artists, which coincides with the profile we were looking for; at the same time, it had to be feasible and easy to contact these people and receive a positive response as soon as possible.

I made a technical worksheet of each possible character, group or collective, with which the Producer would make the contact with it. Some of this people said us that they were interested on this project but for personal reasons they could not participate in our project. We continued researching and contacting with new artists until we get them all we needed. The technical worksheet of the final main characters is in the annexe I.

Characters profile needed to be according the project premises. In general, artists must be between the ages of 20 and 35, and they have to be immersed in the Catalan culture scene. They have to be young people who have chosen to carry out what they love, without being suppressed by the economic crisis of our society.

From this compilation of information and other obtained through social networks and our references, I made the script for the interviews.
5.1.4. Project Workplan.

We divided the work process in different periods of time, to have an agenda and deadlines for the different tasks and phases of the project and finish everything on time, without any rush.

In the annexe IV there is the calendar with the distribution of interviews and meetings with each artist. Nevertheless, this table shows when we have done each task of each phase:

Table 5.1.4. Project Workplan
5.2. Production.

5.2.1. Recording Process.

The roles that each member of the team has taken during this step were: Tommaso as a cameraman shooting the alternative shots; Laura was in charge of the audio and of the fixed camera shooting the XLS; I was in charge to do the interviews and also in charge to the fixed camera. Personally, I was the main responsible for carrying out the role of interviewer because I have been the scriptwriter during the preproduction and for this reason I was more prepared.

Nevertheless, as everyone has been present in the interviews that we could go to, the distribution of these tasks are variable depending on the day of interview, and we all ended up going from a role to another. This fact allowed us to practice the different tasks that surround an audiovisual project of this kind. However, the multiple tasks that we have carried out, have allowed us to experiment our diverse interests, which is part of our project objectives.

On the other hand, on each shooting day we have followed a work plan focused on these four main aspects:

- Arrival and technical assembly: while we talked with the artists, we prepared all the technical aspects to carry out the interview.
- Interview: approximately, each interview conducted lasted between 20 and 30 minutes of shooting.
- Presentation shooting: preferably we looked for a different background in the interview than one to record the characters presentation. For this shot, usually each artist was holding the picture framework and one or both of us was holding the background and the name’s sheet.
- 360º photography: to perform this little timelapse of the face of each artist, the last task in the shooting sessions was performing 60 photos (15 for each 90º angle) around each character.

GENERAL COMMENT: We took the chance that Núria (Numon) and Anna (MissHyde) were in the same street market this day to meet with them. We explained them our ideas face to face and we created a little feedback; and we finally set the interviews dates. Throughout this afternoon we took the opportunity to record shots of both little shops, and of the general atmosphere of this cool market.

GENERAL COMMENT: We spent all afternoon in the Poker Tattoo Studio. At first, we recorded Sam’s tattoo session (he is Laura’s friend), talking with Ismael and asking him previous questions about this world. Later, we recorded the interview with Sam’s help. Laura takes care of the audio recorder and I was making the interview to Ismael and keeping an eye on general camera. In this space it was really impossible placing another camera to record alternative plans.

GENERAL COMMENT: we had problems to record the interview because they were preparing the show requirements, so we had to move through various Theatre rooms looking for the most peaceful place. I was the interviewer and Tommaso recorded the alternative sequences. After the interview, I stayed there a longer time to record Cloverace playing live; however, time and space did not allow me to record the show live, and for that reason the producer of the program sent me this episode in HD resolution.

GENERAL COMMENT: when we did her interview we could not record how she works, for this reason we met with her another day to achieve show how she does a photographic session.

Table 5.2.2. Recording Plan
5.2.3. Cameras and Audio Planning.

The following image shows the general interviews planning. The three first are the general plans of the most of interviews with only one main character. The other three correspond to the planning of GroundPress, Els Laietans and Cloverace respectively.

Fig. 5.2.3.1 Cameras and Audio planning.

Shots obtained of the group interviews are as follows;

Fig. 5.2.3.2 Groupal shots.
5.3. Postproduction.

5.3.1. Video edition.

ASSEMBLY PROCESS

I followed these tasks to edit each chapter of the project:

- Audio and video sync: I created different Premiere projects for each artist, creating a sequence for the interview, another one for alternative plans doing work, and another for the character presentation.

- Screening and selection: at this stage I made a general screening of each interview, writing down its timing, questions asked, the answers we received... I also used to select the best shots and those moments of the interviews that were more interesting, finding them and writing down.

- Off Assembly: to make edition task more visual and practical, I simulated each interview writing it on the worksheet. I tried to do this to order the most important parts of the interviews and to provide each episode of consistency and discourse continuity. So I ordered sequences to speed up the assembling final task.

- Final assembly: I organized the different shots succession, following the scheme previously made, and I established the final duration of every shot. To make sense, continuity and dynamism to the sequence of each episode, I had to review many times each chapter sequence, redo them several times, etc. In the appendix 3 there is the final technical script where it can be found the final succession of shots and music, the music treatment, the general timing, etc.

When we had made the episode sequence edited, we could start creating the introduction and the credits sequence.

For the introductions we have used different alternative shots and images that show the environment, the workplaces... The introduction of each episode must introduce the viewers to the specific cultural theme that will treat this episode and, therefore, each one focus on main images that show the most important things of the characters.
For the final credits, we used plans that, in fact, we have recorded for another moment. By the way, it has served to create an original final credit sequences. These sequences consist in a static XLS showing our photo frame on the left side of the shot; while credits appearing on the right side, in the photo frame appear the main characters faces (like a portrait).

ASSEMBLY ANALYSIS

This is an external assembly, so it is made during the edit phase with nonlinear video postproduction programs. The main characteristics of the style are described below:

It is a discontinuous assembly in its entirety, but each interview has a continuity treatment;

- The discourse of the interviews have juxtaposition elements within the character and his workplace, it shows parallel actions while the character speaks.
- The general discourse is discontinuous because the three interviews that it contains happen in different times and places. This is reflected in transitions, spaces and time variation...

As for the idea and content, it is a descriptive and narrative assembly:

- Each interview has the following structure:
  - Beginning: present characters and introduce us to their environment.
  - Development: the main characters talk us about their projects, their work philosophy, their style, etc.
  - Ending: they talk about their future plans or ideas.

- Each episode has a descriptive nature, to achieve place every artist in his environment and workplace.
  - Regarding to punctuation elements, we used mainly cuts between shots, crossfade transitions (for example by blur), out and in fades, fades to black and from black...
  - In order to provide freshness and dynamism in the sequence, we used expressive resources like acceleration (for example, when an artist is doing its work, as well as slowing down technique (for example, to highlight the most important moments of the interview, or when artists are reflecting on what they say).

- To achieve a continue general discourse in each episode, we used rhythmic techniques like inserting alternative plans in the middle of the dialogue, showing how the artist works; doing musical sequences between two artists; etc.

- Another rhythmic technique that we have used to vary the speech rhythm it was use shots with different duration; the larger shots make the viewer feel a leisurely and quiet moment, more peaceful and calmed; on the other hand, there are shots with fastest durations, which provides the episode with the desired energy, freshness and dynamism.

5.3.2. Audio Edition and Soundtrack.

Tommaso was in charge of carrying out this phase of the edition process. However, while I was doing the video edition, I sometimes needed to make adjustments in the audio files of each interview. I have also done a previous selection of the soundtrack to help my task providing rhythm to the different transition sequences, interviews and episodes.

Referring to the audio treatment, I made the assembly considering that every sound has a rhythm; it occupies a space in time... Every song must also have a purpose in relation to what is shown in that time; it has to cause some feelings and sensations to viewers.

To create our soundtrack list we have used Tommaso songs and music from Free Music Archive [12] (a library of high-quality, legal audio downloads). All these songs are a style of music some experimental, which prominent features include consonant harmony, steady pulse, stasis or gradual transformation, and often reiteration of musical phrases or smaller units such as figures, motifs, and cells.

Referring to audio treatment, Tommaso has worked with Adobe Audition. He exported all the audio tracks from Adobe Premiere and he manipulated there each sound and music, equaling the voice of each interview, regulating the music, etc. Finally, he imported all these tracks to Adobe Premiere again.
5.3.3. PostProduction.

Laura was in charge of this step. She mainly used Magic Bullet Colorista to make the colour correction.

What she tried to do is equate all the images in the same range of colours of each sequence, to achieve the same white balance and matching colours and colour temperatures in general. She also gave brightness to those darkness shots to provide them an aesthetical more alive.

She also carried out the effects of introduction sequences, trying to bring colour correction to the extreme (colour saturation and desaturation, introducing external effects compositing them with our images...). For each introduction, we tried to manipulate them to achieve a style according to the thematic of each episode.

Finally, she did credits sequences. We manipulated the picture framework image with Adobe Photoshop introducing inside it a chroma key. Then Laura replaced this selection with artists’ shots to achieve a portrait effect in them. These videos have been altered in order to provide them a high white tone (burning them a lot). She used different typography styles to draw attention to the viewers, because we think that it is as important those people who have made the project, as those who appears on it.

6.1. Target.

With this series of reports we want to reach to those culture lovers, who can become our potential consumer group. We want to focus to the young Catalan people, mainly from Barcelona, involved in the current Catalan cultural scene.

We look this people between 20 and 35 years old, from every socioeconomic status. We want to achieve this target related to active lifestyle. People who value independent thinking, counter-culture, progressive politics, and who appreciate art, creativity and intelligence. People often intertwined with distinct fashion sensibilities. Maybe people with a certain bohemian life situation and lifestyle, constantly embracing and contributing to independent culture.

This people who have an alive, impulsive, fresh and revitalizing personality. People who follow trends or who set it. People who have interests related to the seven arts and urban culture. People who break the rules and codes established; people who respond to their own impulses.

We refer to this people that values being accompanied by their friends; who are optimist and trust in their friends. People who search new experiences and new things; those who search this unusual and unconventional style of live.

We have just established a theoretic distribution plan, because we will distribute it in a near future. For the moment we have created a Gmail account from which we have been in contact with all the artists during the production process.

From July, the most important part of the distribution channel would be Internet and social networks mainly. The idea is upload weekly the different chapters in a Vimeo and in a Youtube channel, both created from Gmail account (from which the three members of the work team can access to). As the artist interviewed will post the link of the video on their social networks, the diffusion could be large.

If the serial episodes are accepted and if we find a financial support from the EUPMT, another social networks that we have in mind to work in are mainly Facebook and Twitter; because all our artists and their world are connected on them, and they would be a good network for the dissemination of our work online and so there could be a daily monitoring from our viewers.

Finally, the tool that will encompass all these media will be our own Blog (rostres.wordpress.com), which will be the focal point for the distribution of the product and where the other tools mentioned will be interrelate.

We also would try to sell the program to Local TV Channel, Xarxa de Televisions Locals [7], these Televisions are always interested in emit closed realities and products about fellow citizens, so our program could fit on their grid. We will also try to contact with Televisió de Catalunya (Catalan public TV from CCMA [6]) because it incorporates in its secondary thematic channels some cultural programs and documentaries.

Finally, we decided that the best product license and the closest to our work is Creative Commons [13] because it is a public copyright license and we are comfortable with its principles. In general, it offers a higher accessibility to our project and it adapts with our needs with its flexibility and sturdiness.

We have specifically selected the Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike (CC BY-NC-SA). This license lets other remix, tweak, and build upon our work non-commercially, as long as they credit us and license their new creations under the identical terms.

We are very happy with the final result obtained. We have created a high level product that can become a professional TV program which comes within the new television formats. Thanks to the efforts in the specific format design, we achieved to adapt the product form to the contents nature.

However, I assess different points of the project below.

7.1. Results analysis.

7.1.1. Aims and Objectives achieved.

We have worked hard to achieve our aims. The only aspect that has remained weak has been to break with the traditional reportage structure, to get a new format and visual aesthetic that fits with the reportage topic. It has been difficult to achieve it because we prioritized another aspects of the project that in that moment we considered most important.

7.1.2. Calendar timing.

We were luck with artists who have collaborated with us because they have adapted so much to our schedules, and also thanks to the production work. When we started the project, the three Producer Team members did not have any job, but over the last few months we have found some jobs and we had to accept them; for this reason we struggled a little bit to meet ourselves and, also, with the artists. However, we have divided the tasks as well as we could, so no one ever has been alone.

7.1.3. Work Team.

We decided do the project in this work team because we were enthusiastic about work all together. Now we are at the end of this process, and I am personally happy to have worked with my partners for some reasons; we have worked with less stress in finding solutions in harder moments; we have shared responsibility finding solutions from different points of view; our best influence can help the other partners in the most difficult moments; we have taken decisions with the entire team participation having a higher acceptance, which enrich the work and minimizes frustration; we can feel gratified to participate in a work well done; we can share professional recognitions; etc.
Regarding to the timing organization, we have always tried to combine our personal activities with the project’s obligations. Given that we worked on this project with a little margin of time, during the last phase we have had to work very hard and against time; this situation has caused little stressful times. Anyway, we have been able to manage well our time and we have distributed well the different tasks that had to be conducted in parallel.

7.1.4. Final Product.

The project mentally idea was not exactly like the result we have obtained; nevertheless, I am happy with the product we obtained after many hours of work.

Maybe the episodes could have a longer duration, but we did not had enough time to achieve all the alternative resources that would be necessary. Maybe if we had started this the project in September we have achieved a better result, but we note that our initial idea was completely different and we spent many months working on it before surrendering ourselves.
7.2. Conclusions.

It was the first time that I worked on a project of this size and importance, and the effort and the dedicated hours that I have spent have reward with my satisfaction.

This report shows the work done during the production of this product, through the three principal stages of the project: preproduction, production and postproduction.

On the first stage, earlier than these production phases, analyses the national and regional television current situation, as well as the current economical and financial situation of our society. At the same time, it establishes the aesthetic and visual principles analysing the main references of the product.

In the production process, are specified the roles that each group member has taken in each phase of the project and has also been noted how has been this work in a small team and our feedback taking decisions. In the first phase is explained the entire organization and research conducted; the second phase explains the entire recording process; the last phase is a review of the assembly and postproduction principles for which we are guided.

The last part of this report contains the future product distribution plan specifying the target and the main platforms with which we will work.

As a final observation, I believe that we have been a good work team and that we have coordinated very well. With regard to the personal project, I considered it very interesting and it has given me new knowledge, as technical such as theoretical contents.

About the final result of the project, I am quite happy because I think we have created a nice audiovisual product. I am aware that I have many skills to be strengthened in the audiovisual field but, within my possibilities, the result is enough decently and fits well with the initial idea.

2. Sale market price.

2.1. Total amount for chapter.

Considering that the picture framework and the materials cost for the camera slider manufacture are general season costs, and theoretically, a season consists in 4 chapter/month for 8 months (for a total of 36 chapters), the partial cost, for this materials, for chapter is 1,28 € each. So the production cost is 32,75 € for each chapter.

2.2. Sale price for chapter.

To establish the product price in the market we have to add the developing costs, which include humans resources costs, tools amortization costs, indirect costs and commercial range. Including the interest costs, for each chapter the cost is about 3.284,50 €.

For a theoretical season of 36 chapters we obtain:

I've always liked old objects, objects with a previous life. Actually my personal project BOSSES AMB HISTÒRIA (Bags with history) was born out of my taste for vintage plus the combination of recycling and reuse. I can't think of a better way to apply that idea to our everyday life accessories conceived to make our lifes easier and more comfortable.

Then, my partner, who likes making wallets from old comics, joined the project. That's how we started a collection of recycled accessories called Numon.

Numon focuses on the reuse of all kinds of materials in disuse: it turns bedcovers, sheets and tableclothes into bags and purses; and comics and magazines into wallets and credit card holders.

Numon wants to make people aware of the fact that giving a new life to forgotten objects from the past, it's possible to create unique, functional and funny accessories. Besides, we can help to slow down the prevailing cycle of consumerism in our society.

Hello, I'm Conrad Roset, freelance illustrator from Barcelona, Spain. Currently working on a range of projects for advertisement agencies, design studios and editorials. Also, I'm a professor of illustration in the school of design BAU.

Conrad Roset spent the first part of his 28 years in Terrassa, his native city, among boxes of crayons, felt-tip pens and notebooks; the other part in Barcelona, surrounded by paints, moleskine notebooks, muses, colored pencils, and in the company of his gray cat. Drawing has been his passion and a constant feature in his life, since he played with his brother at drawing everything they liked until, years later, he draw inspiration from women to create the Muses, his most personal collection. “I search the beauty the body exudes, I like drawing the female figure.” He received his education at the Joso School and at the Faculty of Fine Arts in Barcelona. Thanks to the spreading of his illustrations through the Internet, he started working for Zara. There, he says, he learnt about his trade, about regularity, and how to study styles of reference illustrators. A year later, he launched himself as a freelance artist, and since then he works for different brands, advertising agencies, and publishing companies.

He has exhibited his work in galleries and museums, such as the MOMA in Virginia, Spoke Art in San Francisco, London Miles in London, Tipos Infames in Madrid, and Artevistas and Miscelanea in Barcelona. Besides, he is a professor of illustration at the School of Design BAU.
