Two infrastructures

The planned program is enabled through two infrastructures.

On the upper floor, a new white-going floor is designed to spread in between the existing factory walls, like a liquid being held by a framework. This arrangement enables to link different parts of the factory that are currently isolated. Wall surfaces and ceramic rails are left intact, since the floor is the only element that is being activated.

On a higher level, a linear walkway system perforates the factory allowing the various narrative segments that emerge from exterior paired spaces to interact with factory walls with the original activity in the background.
