A first steel mesh contains the new stones, and these contain land and gravel that jointly will reproduce the successive horizontal planes where the Romans transited. A second denser and thinner mesh is arranged like a curtain over a period of time, outlining where the various components document the new waves of occupation and industry. In this way stone and steel, mountain and industry, living in these landscapes of accumulation and, however, dynamic by the contact between the fragments.

STEEL FENCE

PRODUCTIVE FOREST

AFTER

BEFORE

SUBTRACTION

ADDITION

FENCE DETAIL

HIGHWAY PATHWALK

EXTRAMURAL
RECOVERY OF AN INDUSTRIAL LANDSCAPE IN THE SUBURBS OF BARCELONA

TEXT AND IMAGE SOURCE: "Can Tacó Fence" by Toni Gironès