

This document explains us how to design, assemble , and test a measurement system of environmental variables of the Campus' pond for establishing and controlling the water quality. The system digitalizes the measured data, and after that it sends them into a PC, because the computer processes the data and spread the results. This project measures the temperature and the conductivity without electrical contact for avoiding the fouling problem.